Harvesting Late Vegetables

The arrival of autumn frosts need not put an end to harvests from vegetable gardens. There are ways to harvest them so that the richness of natural maturity will not be lost. Do not put vegetables in the sun to ripen. According to garden specialists there is a rapid and effective way of saving the last tomato crop. The vines, roots and all, are pulled out of the ground and piled in a small stack about three feet or so wide and the same in height. In an open spot in the garden. As many of the fruits as possible should be on the inside of the stack, with the roots outside. Thus the tomatoes are shielded by an array of foliage and have the benefit of natural maturity, as the plants slowly wither. It may be possible to pick good tomatoes from such stacks for a month or longer. Care should be taken that the stacks are not too large or tightly packed or heat will be generated which will rapidly spoil the fruit. Peppers also can be saved by this same method.

If the gardener has the time and space, indoor storage of tomatoes, egg plants and peppers will be advantageous. For best results, the pulled plants are hung up by the roots in a cool room to ripen, and used as needed.

Don't Wash Rice

Georgia and South Carolina Experiment Stations now say that rice cooks best if not washed before cooking. They say rice now purchased today has been processed and that washing causes losses as high as 43% of the thiamine. It also makes it sticky and gummy rather than fluffy.

To cook rice, use twice as much water as rice. Example: 1 cup rice, 2 cups boiling water, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Add rice to boiling salted water, stirring gently. Cover, return to boiling, reduce heat so rice will simmer. Cook for 15 minutes. Don't peek! Rice cooked by this method won't stick or boil over. When cooking rice, use a sauce pan with close fitting cover.

Why Not Start A Compost Pile?

Smoke from burning leaves may lend fragrance to the autumn air, but to any thrifty gardener, those leaves are better off in a compost pile. Right now is a good time to put those waste materials to good use forming humus and fertilizer for next spring's garden. Humus helps the soil to hold more moisture and makes it easier to work.

Oowadays, when so many homemakers are enthusiastic gardeners, directions for making compost rank with other favorite recipes. Here are the steps in building a compost pile, as suggested by specialists at the New York Experiment Startion.

Start with a layer of leaves about eight inches deep. Then sprinkle three cups of commerical fertilizer and 2/3 cup of lime over the leaves. Water this layer well, and spread about an inch of garden soil on top. The soil and water aid in the decay of the leaves to form humus.

Layers of leaves, lime, fertilizer, and soil should be alternated until the pile is about four feet high. Grass slippings and other plant materials also make good compost. A slight dent in the center of the top layer helps to hold rain water which soaks into the compost and speeds the "aging" process. Add extra water to the compost pile during dry periods to prevent it from drying. Turning and mixing the pile once or twice will hasten the process.

In about six months the compost should be thoroughly decomposed and ready for the garden, either spaded into the soil or spread on top.

/An important point about stock car racing that may not have occurred to you:

The safer car wins . . .
and Chevrolet is the big winner

Auto races aren't won by brute horsepower. Roadability, acceleration, precision steering and stamina —the very qualities that make a car safer for you—are the keys to victory on the track! And that's why Chevrolet is top car, by far, on the rugged NASCAR (National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing) Short Track circuit.

Faster acceleration means safer passing

Chevrolet's cannonball acceleration has punched past many a bigger car to victory. But the same blazing surge is a vital safety factor on the highway—one that can whisk you more safely around other cars and out of critical situations.

PASS WITH CARE

Easier, super accurate steering

Nimble is the word for Chevrolet. But you don't have to see them in action on a tight quarter-mile track to judge how they make other cars seem clumsy. You can feel that yourself in the press of traffic, and sense the feather-light precision of Ball-Race steering in every curve. There's extra safety, too, in Glide-Ride front suspension that sops up the harshest bumps—that lets your car "keep its feet under it" for maximum traction on the roughest roads.

ROUGH ROAD

The ability to slow down and stop quickly and smoothly

Those big 11-inch brakes have averted many a disaster in the close-packed battle of racing. But they weren't designed for that; they were made to give you "heads-up" stops and extra stopping power in traffic, on mountain grades, on high-speed expressways. Competition has merely proved their margin of superiority!

STOP

Come in and try out this new winner yourself . . . and see how easy we're making it to buy a Chevrolet right now!

More stability on curves

Chevrolet's famous stability means money in the bank to the race driver—it lets him broadside through turns faster and smoother. But it means peace of mind to you on the road — more comfort in every curve and less body-roll with broad-based Outrigger rear springs, extra security if you have to swerve sharply to meet an emergency, a solid "one-piece" feel that is a delight to any driver.

A growing list of Chevrolet victories in stock car competition

Will Close Lime Plant

State Board of Agriculture has announced the it will close the lime grinding plant which has been operated by the board for many years in this county.

Reduced farmer demands for lime, and competition from private suppliers, were cited as reasons for the closing of the Appomattox plant.

It is understand that the plant will continue to operate, on a day to day basis, for a while, in order to dispose of some 1,700 tons of stockpile lime.

A lime plant is expected to open in Campbell County and be in operation by Nov. 15.

The Appomattox lime Grinding Plant has been a tremendous factor in the rehabilitation of land in this county since the days of the depression. Application of needed lime has materially aided in the development of better pastures and grain lands.

New Course Is Offered Here

A cooperative part time training program which requires the joint interests and efforts of the high school, businesses and community has been started this year at Appomattox High School, under the direction of Jerry Miller, Coordinator.

This program is beneficial to the schools by providing training that is needed; to the employers by training more efficient personnel, and the community by receiving better service as consumers.

Students may enroll in Distributive Education (D. E.) or the Diversified Occupations (D. O.) program.

Distributive Education refers to vocational education for those engaged in distributing goods and services to the public, including all retails, wholesale, and service occupations.

Diversified Occupations is a program designed to provide vocational industrial training opportunities for those students interested in learning a trade or working in industrial establishments.

The D. E. and D. O. program is open to all juniors and seniors, who meet certain requirements and are in good standing in the high school. The student trainee averages a minimum of 15 hours a week of work experience through out the school year and he is paid the prevailing wage.

Mr. Miller is responsible for teaching the necesary related instruction for the on-the-job training in the classroom, and the coordination of the student, employer, and the school.

Mr. Miller, of Berryville, Va. has moved to Appomattox. Mrs. Miller and their two children, Jerry Allan Jr. and Rebecca Anne, will move here in a few days. He is a graduate of Emory and Henry College, and did graduate work at V. P. I.
